The world's leading trade fair for the meat industry is this year hosting a leading global supplier of specialist conveyor belting solutions for meat and poultry: Ammeraal Beltech. With a long history of supporting the food industry as a whole, the company has a number of innovative products on show on stand E68 in Hall 9.1 which, according to Meat Industry Segment Manager Sander Bakker, 'bring a new era of hygiene, high performance, and cost efficiency to the meat processing business'.

Innovative solutions

On show at IFFA will be the company's latest innovative contribution to efficient production: the new UltraClean Two-Part Sprocket® which, with its unique hygienic design features, has proved a major improvement on food safety working in partnership with the company's advanced range of modular belting series for the food industry. Also featured at IFFA are the company's unique Soliflex homogeneous belts, focussed on delivering the highest levels of hygiene for meat handling; international food-safety legislation compliant; and offering optimal production throughput and reduced operational costs.
